Associate Professor and the Head of the Language and Culture Studies Department at the Jesuit University Ignatianum in Cracow, with her research affiliated to the General and Applied Ethics Department at the same university. She obtained her Ph.D. at the Jagiellonian University in Cracow (the Faculty of Philology), and her postdoctoral degree (habilitacja) at the University of Silesia, Katowice (the Faculty of Humanities). Currently, she gives classes on biopolitics and ethics, as well as utopian studies. She gave talks and classes at many European universities (e.g., Oxford University, Cambridge University, Universidad Complutense de Madrid). She is a member of Utopian Studies Society-Europe, and a HEST group Humanization in Health, and cooperates with a number of organizations and centers on the topics related to new technologies (e.g., Centre for Axiology of New Technologies and Social Change, Future Law Lab). She specializes in interdisciplinary study of biotechnological utopias and dystopias.
