

Name: Jingyi Zhu

Institutional affiliation: Independent Researcher

Email: jingyi.zhu.17@ucl.ac.uk

Jingyi Zhu gained her PhD at the Bartlett School of Planning, UCL. Her doctoral thesis discussed on the role of public space in urban transformation processes and its duality as a tool to achieve the city's strategic development visions and a site for citizens' everyday uses in the Shanghai urban regeneration context. Her research interests include urban design in particular public space design and management, and the study of design practice. Jingyi also has degrees in urban planning, urban design and policy making from Tongji University and Politecnico di Milano. She is currently a postdoctoral researcher working on projects related to urban design governance.

Publications (5 máx):

- Zhu, Jingyi, "Rethinking publicness: Making public space in an 'excellent global city' and the rhetoric and reality of people-orientedness", Arbor, 198 (803-804), 2022, a647. <https://doi.org/10.3989/arbor.2022.803-804014>
- Zhu, Jingyi, "Heterotopia and the Ordering of Contested Urban Public Space: A Case Study of the Sarpi Neighbourhood (Chinatown) in Milan", in J. León Casero and J. Urabayen (eds.), Differences in the City. Postmetropolitan Heterotopias as Liberal Utopian Dreams (pp. 99-114), Nova Science Publishers, New York, 2022.

